HISTORY

The rich heritage of First Baptist Church of Glenarden (FBCG) got its roots in 1917 as a small, home-based Bible study located in Glenarden, Md. Those meetings evolved into a church from the seeds planted by a few.

There have been numerous defining moments in the life of the church, including the installation of our seventh shepherd, Pastor John K. Jenkins Sr., in 1989.

In 1992, the church purchased and converted a former hardware and home improvement store into a house of worship in Landover, Md. Six years later, FBCG became a debt-free ministry when God supernaturally allowed the church to burn its 20-year mortgage. In 2007, FBCG moved into a new, 4,000-seat edifice located seven miles away in neighboring Upper Marlboro, Md., paying nearly 50 percent of its overall construction cost in cash before the first service was held.

We have witnessed countless testimonies of transformed lives, restored marriages, strengthened families, and supernatural healings, as well as local outreach and global missions that are at the core of why we exist to develop dynamic disciples.

What started out with a small group of believers and led by seven pastors has evolved into something even they could not have imagined. Under the leadership of Pastor Jenkins, God has steadily increased the church membership from 500 to more than 10,000. An average of 11,000 people attend weekly Sunday services, in addition to over 52,000 who tune in online. Through uncompromised biblically based preaching and teaching, God continues to take this ministry to new heights for His kingdom and glory.
